Australia

Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial:

China and Australia are countries washed by the Pacific, and the peoples of the two countries have a traditional friendship. Although having different social systems, our two countries both wish to develop their friendly relations on the basis of the five principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful coexistence. .... Thanks to the joint efforts made by the two governments, China and Australia established diplomatic relations last December. We are glad to see that the friendly relations between our two countries have developed considerably since. The two sides have exchanged many delegations; the economic and cultural contacts between the peoples have been growing daily. All this has promoted the mutual understanding and the friendship between the Chinese and Australian peoples.

("Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial Warmly Welcomes Distinguished Guests from South Pacific," NCNA-English, Peking, October 31, 1973 -- SCMP 73-46/25-27)

Chou En-lai, Premier:

The Chinese and Australian peoples have always been friendly toward each other. .... Our relations entered a new stage with the establishment of formal diplomatic relations in 1972. Through our joint efforts, they have made gratifying progress in the past year. We are confident that this official visit of the Honorable Prime Minister Whitlam to China will open up bright prospects for the further development of our relations.

Canada

Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial:

The people of China and Canada have a profound traditional friendship. They sympathized with and supported each other in the struggle against Fascist aggression during the Second World War.....

Though China and Canada have different social systems, they have the common desire to develop their friendly relations on the basis of the five principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit and peaceful coexistence. The two countries established diplomatic relations in October, 1970. This is a big event in the annals of their relationship, which has opened a broad prospect for developing the friendship between the two peoples. There have been many exchanges of visits between government delegations of the two countries; economic and cultural interflow is developing; and contacts between the two peoples are daily increasing. All this helps to promote Sino-Canadian relations and deepen the friendly feeling between the two peoples.

... The Chinese Government and people always hold that all countries in the world, big or small, are equal. China wishes to work with all other countries and peoples who love peace and uphold justice in a concerted effort against the hegemonism and power politics of the superpowers.

Chou En-lai, Premier:

The Chinese and Canadian peoples have always been friendly to each other. The wide Pacific Ocean separates our two countries geographically, but it is no barrier to our friendship.....

Although China and Canada have different social systems, both our sides have the genuine desire of developing the relations between the two countries on the basis of the five principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful coexistence. Thanks to this common ground, in the three years since our two countries established diplomatic relations, trade and exchanges in the scientific, technological, cultural and other fields have developed smoothly, friendly contacts at government level and between the peoples have steadily increased, and the exchange of visit by specialized delegations of various kinds has also become more and more frequent. All this has enhanced our mutual understanding and friendship.

Egypt

Chou En-lai, Premier:

The Chinese and Egyptian peoples have forged a profound friendship in their long struggle against imperialism and colonialism. Since the Bandung Conference, the friendly relations and cooperation between our two countries have steadily developed on the basis of the five principles of peaceful coexistence through the joint efforts of both sides. His Excellency Vice-President Shafei's current visit to China will certainly further the fraternal friendship between the Chinese and Egyptian peoples and the friendly relations and cooperation between the two countries and make a new contribution to the struggle of the Third World against imperialism, colonialism and hegemonism.

France

Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial:

Though China and France are situated on two different continents with thousands of miles in between, friendly sentiments have existed between the people of these two countries for many centuries. Thanks to the attention shown by Chairman Mao Tse-tung and General De Gaulle and their promotion, diplomatic relations were established between China and France in 1964, thus turning a new page in the history of Sino-French relations and opening up broad prospects for the development of the friendship between the two peoples. The relations between China and France have since experienced considerable progress. The many reciprocal visits by governmental delegations of both countries and the growing contacts and economic and cultural interflow between the two peoples have enhanced mutual understanding between the two countries and the friendly sentiments between the two peoples.

Chou En-lai, Premier:

Though China and France have different social systems, we both wish to develop our relations on the basis of the five principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful coexistence. Therefore, we can be friends. We have another important point in common, namely: We both treasure our independence and sovereignty; we both brook no control, interference or aggression by any superpower in the world; and we both are against the monopoly of world affairs by the one or two superpowers.

Mr. President, your current visit to China provides an opportunity of an exchange of views between our two sides on the Sino-French relations and issues of common interest, which, we believe, will have the beneficial effect of enhancing the mutual understanding and cooperation between our two peoples and open up good prospects for the development of the relations between China and France.

("Premier Chou En-lai's Speech," NCNA-English, Peking, September 11, 1973 -- SCMP 73-38/330-333)

Communique:

.... The governments of the two countries are moved by a common desire to reinforce the friendship between the two peoples and develop the relations between the two countries. Although the People's Republic of China and France have different social systems, their relations are based on a good foundation, notably because of their common adherence to the following principle: equality of all countries, big or small and irrespective of their social systems, and mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity. The affairs of a country and its people should be settled by themselves free from foreign interference and in conformity with the principle of the independence of nations. For the improvement of the international situation, the two sides declare themselves against all hegemony.

.... The two sides are gratified with the progress achieved in the field of economic exchanges and industrial and technical contacts, thanks particularly to a number of visits paid by delegations and to exhibitions and technical displays organized in the two countries. They are equally gratified with the favorable prospects which have appeared in this regard. They have also agreed to study further the practical possibilities of developing economic relations and the problem of increasing the exchanges in the field of technology as well as in that of industry, especially in the developed sectors of petro-chemistry, aeronautics and mechanical and electrical industries.

Korea

Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial:

The Chinese people firmly support the Korean people in their just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, and in their just demand for the withdrawal of US troops from South Korea and dissolution of "the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea." We are convinced that the Korean people will certainly clear away all obstacles and achieve the sacred object of reunifying the fatherland without any foreign interference.

China and Korea washed by the same river and connected by the same mountains are of the same family. In the flames of war against the common enemy, the peoples have cemented in blood an unbreakable militant friendship which is based on Marxism-Leninism and the principle of proletarian internationalism and can stand the test of any violent storm. In the common struggle against imperialism at present, in the future, and in the common cause of socialist revolution and socialist construction, the Chinese people will, as always, unite and cooperate closely with the Korean people and march forward shoulder to shoulder.

("Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial Greeting 25th Founding Anniversary of DPRK," NCNA-English, Peking, September 9, 1973--SCMP 73-38/190-192)

Li Teh-sheng, Vice-Chairman of the Central Committee of the CPC:

China and Korea are close neighbors related to each other as the lips to the teeth. Our two peoples are comrades-in-arms and brothers sharing weal and woe. We have always fought shoulder to shoulder for our common revolutionary goals and have been rejoiced and heartened by the victories in our common struggle. The Chinese people will bring into full play the revolutionary spirit embodied in the recent 10th National Congress of the Chinese Communist Party, continue to uphold proletarian internationalism and strive to further enhance the militant friendship and great unity between the Chinese and Korean peoples. We trust that this friendship and unity, based on Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, will surely grow from generation to generation and yield richer fruits in our common cause.

New Zealand

Pai Hsiang-kuo, Minister of Foreign Trade:

The Chinese Government always stands for developing trade relations with other countries on the basis of equality and mutual benefit in accordance with needs and possibilities so as to promote the development of the economy of both sides.... We hope to strengthen the growing ties between China and New Zealand by developing contacts between the trading communities in the two countries.... We are determined to be politically and economically independent and we do not like to depend too heavily on any one country, or group of countries. We are anxious to develop new markets--especially markets that will be reliable in the longer term, markets that will help us to maintain our independence.

Vietnam

Jen-min Jih-pao Editorial:

China and Viet Nam are linked by mountains and rivers and are as closely related as the lips and the teeth. In the protracted revolutionary struggles, the people of our two countries have always supported and encouraged each other, and have forged an unbreakable and militant friendship. ... The Chinese people have always sympathized with and supported the revolutionary struggle of the Vietnamese people, and regarded as their own the difficulties and victories of the Vietnamese people. We shall, as in the past, unswervingly perform our proletarian internationalist duty and resolutely support the Vietnamese people in their just struggle till complete victory.
